

When making charitable donations at death, clients need to examine the most tax-efficient source from which to transfer to charity. In addition, decisions must be made between direct contributions versus the establishment of a pool of funds. In many cases, children/descendants may be named as directors to select the causes each year to benefit from the pool of funds. This allows the client to leave a value legacy, not just a personal legacy.

